Join us in Perth

The great Ruth Bader Ginsburg said, “fight for the things you care about, but do it in a way that will lead others to join you”. As we contemplate what the world looks like for those we care for in 2023, this statement remains poignant. The health and wellbeing of those in our profession and of our patients remains fraught with disparities that challenge us. The delivery of excellent clinical care cannot be considered a silo and is critically dependent on addressing issues in the gender divide, individual rights and responsibilities, and equitable access to opportunities. We must fight for fairness in these issues and accept that 2023 is not a time to rest on our laurels, but instead to address the myriad of equity issues that underpin health outcomes.

This year’s theme “Aiming Higher: More than Healthcare” is a call to action for all of us. We must achieve the best health and non-health outcomes for our patients, while providing high quality, cutting edge, evidence-based care, that at the same time addresses the equity issues our patients face. Seems straight forward enough! We have charged our slew of national and international speakers to bring us the latest updates in obstetrics and gynaecology while also challenging us to aim higher and seek the outcomes for our patients that befits the year 2023.

We are excited to bring you plenary sessions on abortion, conflict, and equity with an impressive field of internationally renowned speakers. Concurrent sessions will cover all aspects of obstetrics and gynaecology from labour ward to sub-speciality topics, simulation and training, global health, First Nations health, and the mental health of our profession.

Excellent, evidence-based updates aside, the ASM is going to be a glorious time to visit Perth. The city sees an average of 300 hours of sunshine in October, rainfall is rare, and the average temperature sits in the balmy mid 20’s. Take an extra day or two on the West Coast and enjoy a run in Kings Park, a selfie with a Quokka on Rottnest Island, or a drive through the southwest winery region.

Jennifer Pontré and Emma Allanson

We’re looking forward to seeing everyone in Borloo (Perth)!

Meeting Room 2

Sponsor: Pfizer
Speaker: Prof Peter Richmond, Dr Andrea Atkinson, Mrs Katherine Kieran

Decades after the search started, preventative RSV measures are finally in sight with a focus on safeguarding the most vulnerable, including infants during the earliest months of life. These potential prevention strategies currently under review by the TGA include a maternal vaccine to protect infants and a monoclonal antibody administered directly to them.

In light of this potential transformation in the RSV prevention landscape, this Masterclass will encompass essential elements, including Australian data concerning the burden of disease during pregnancy and in infants as well as its impact on families. We will delve into the role and effectiveness of the transplacental transfer of maternal RSV antibodies and explore the future landscape of prevention, particularly within the realm of perinatal care.

Guideline recommended MHT[1-7*]

*Guidelines recommend transdermal estrogen and micronised progesterone over oral estrogen and synthetic progestins, respectively.[1-7]

ESTROGEL® PRO

MEDICINE CO-PACK CONTAINING ONE PACK OF ESTROGEL® (ESTRADIOL HEMIHYDRATE) PLUS ONE PACK OF PROMETRIUM® (MICRONISED PROGESTERONE) FOR WOMEN WITH AN INTACT UTERUS

ESTROGEL®
ESTRADIOL HEMIHYDRATE

NO INCREASED RISK OF VTE WITH TRANSDERMAL ESTROGEN

(OR 0.93 VS NON-USERS)[8†‡]

‡Estrogel is contraindicated in women with previous or current VTE[9]

PROMETRIUM®
MICRONISED PROGESTERONE

NO INCREASED RISK OF BREAST CANCER

WITH UP TO 5 YEARS USE WITH A MORE FAVOURABLE RISK PROFILE THAN SYNTHETIC PROGESTOGENS[1-4,10-12^]

^Prometrium is contraindicated in women with mammary carcinoma[13]

†Results from two nested case-control studies assessing the association between VTE risk and different types of MHT. Odds ratios are based on cases and controls matched by age and practice, and adjusted for smoking status, BMI, family history of VTE, chronic and recent medical events, other drugs, and past exposures to hormones.[8]

Minimum Product Information Estrogel (estradiol hemihydrate) Indications: Hormone replacement therapy (HRT) for estrogen deficiency symptoms in postmenopausal women. Prevention of osteoporosis in postmenopausal women at high risk of future fractures who are intolerant of, or contraindicated for, other medicinal products approved for the prevention of osteoporosis. The lowest effective dose should be used for the shortest duration. Contraindications: Known, past or suspected breast cancer; Known or suspected estrogen-dependent malignant tumours (e.g. endometrial cancer); Undiagnosed genital bleeding; Untreated endometrial hyperplasia; Previous or current venous thromboembolism (e.g. deep venous thrombosis, pulmonary embolism); Known thrombophilic disorders (e.g. protein C, protein S, or antithrombin deficiency); Active or recent arterial thromboembolic disease (e.g. angina, myocardial infarction); Acute liver disease, or a history of liver disease as long as liver function tests have failed to return to normal; Known or suspected pregnancy; Lactation; Known hypersensitivity to the active substances or to any of the excipients; Porphyria. Precautions: Appraisal of the risks and benefits should be undertaken at least annually. Refer to full Product information (PI) for conditions which require supervision during treatment with Estrogel. Treatment should be withdrawn if the following occur, jaundice or deterioration in liver function; significant increase in blood pressure; new onset of migraine type headache; pregnancy. Caution: endometrial hyperplasia and carcinoma, breast cancer, ovarian cancer, venous thromboembolism, coronary artery disease (CAD), ischaemic stroke, thyroid function, elderly, paediatric use (see full PI). Interactions: use of concomitant skin medications, surface active agents or strong skin cleansers and detergents should be avoided at site of application, metabolism of estrogens may be increased by concomitant use of inducers of hepatic enzymes such as anticonvulsants (phenobarbital, phenytoin, carbamezapine) and anti-infectives (rifampicin, rifabutin, nevirapine, efavirenz, ritonavir and nelfinavir) and some herbal preparations (St John's wort) reducing the effectiveness of estrogen, Estrogel as a transdermal administration might be less affected than other oral hormones by enzyme inducers. Pregnancy Category B3; not for use in lactation. Adverse Effects: headache, nausea, abdominal pain, breast swelling/pain, breast enlargement, dysmenorrhea, menorrhagia, metrorraghia, leucorrhooea, endometrial hyperplasia, weight gain (increase or decrease), water retention with peripheral edema (see full PI). Dosage and Administration: Estrogel should be used daily on a continuous basis. Estrogel as an estrogen only product is indicated only for women without a uterus. In women with an intact uterus it is recommended to add a progestogen for at least 12 days of each month. Although some women will respond to 1.25 g daily (1 pump), the usual starting dose is 2.5 g per day (2 pumps). If after one month of treatment, effective relief of menopausal symptoms is not obtained the dosage may be increased to a maximum of 5 g (4 pumps) (see full PI). The lowest effective dose should be used for maintenance therapy. The optimal daily maintenance dose needs to be reevaluated regularly (e.g. annually). Estrogel should only be continued for as long as the benefit outweighs the risk. The correct dose of gel should be dispensed and applied to clean, dry, intact areas of skin e.g. on the arms and shoulders, and/or inner thighs. The area of application should be as large as possible. Refer to Full Product Information before prescribing.

MEDICAL EDUCATION BREAKFAST SYMPOSIUM RANZCOG ASM 2023

Wednesday, 1 November 2023
Meeting Room 2 | Perth Convention & Exhibition Centre

Exploring the bridge between respiratory syncytial virus (RSV) and obstetrics

After decades of research, preventative respiratory syncytial virus (RSV) measures are finally in sight with a focus on safeguarding the most vulnerable, including infants during the earliest months of life. These potential prevention strategies in infants include a maternal vaccine and a monoclonal antibody administered to infants.

In light of this potential transformation in the RSV prevention landscape, the symposium will encompass essential elements, including Australian data concerning the burden of disease during pregnancy and in infants as well as its potential impact on families. We will delve into the role of naturally acquired maternal RSV antibodies and explore the future landscape of prevention, particularly within the realm of perinatal care.

AGENDA

- Overview of RSV and the burden of disease in Australia
- RSV infection in pregnancy and transplacental transfer of antibodies
- Severe RSV in an infant: A parent's perspective
- Future RSV prevention landscape and relevance to obstetricians
- Q&A

This event is for Australian Healthcare Professionals only.
